"This class gave me things I can take back to my department and apply immediately to be a better supervisor."

"This class is an incredible opportunity."

"This is the best class I have been to at WCTC in 10+ years!"

This course is designed to help police leaders be better emotionally prepared to handle stressors typical of today's law enforcement career and teach participants to be purpose-driven leaders.

The most prevalent issues impacting law enforcement in America today are staffing shortages, job burnout, and poor organizational Inter-related; these dynamics correspond with officer well-being, overall employee morale, and interpersonal relationships between coworkers and police/community. Emotionally resilient, purpose-driven leaders can better equip themselves and the people around them by better-handling workplace stressors.

During this course, students also take the DISC Behavioral Assessment, where they learn to enhance relationships through improved communication and empathy by understanding their personality style and those around them.

Topics will include:

- Leading with a purpose
- Positive leadership
- Self-accountability and ownership
- The mindset of the emotionally resilient leader

This course is designed for those in law enforcement or the fire service currently in a supervisor role or ready to step into an official supervisory role, either first-line or mid-level for both sworn and non-sworn personnel.

Instructor:

Ron Bayne, Director of Training & Consulting
