"Great information and presentation. The instructors are very knowledgeable and it was a great breakdown."

"This was a great surface level dive into Generative AI."

Attendees March 2026

Join us for a practical, tool-agnostic course—centered on ChatGPT but applicable across platforms—and designed to help public safety professionals lead with confidence as AI becomes an everyday tool in government operations.

The session begins with a clear, accessible foundation in how generative AI systems like ChatGPT work—what they can (and can't) do—and explores their relevance to public sector operations. Participants will explore key legal and ethical considerations, including appropriate use, public sector context, and responsible integration into workplace routines. While not a legal deep dive, the session will briefly address attribution practices and how to ensure outputs reflect user authorship through thoughtful iteration and prompt refinement.

From there, the course shifts to practical demonstrations and real-world examples that highlight how generative AI can support public safety leaders in their daily work. These include:

- Streamlining communications (e.g., internal memos, external communications, briefing summaries)
- Supporting staffing and workforce planning (e.g., job documentation, scenario modeling, policy development)
- Enhancing operational workflows (e.g., training content, FAQs, scheduling templates)

The focus is on realistic, immediately useful applications, without requiring advanced technical skills.

This full-day training is tailored to supervisors, managers, and key administrative personnel in the public safety field who want to better understand how generative AI can enhance their work today and reshape operations in the years ahead.

Instructor:

Patrick Glynn is the Founder and Principal Consultant of BoldPath Consulting, LLC, bringing over 30 years of public sector leadership experience in human resources, labor relations, organizational analysis, and management consulting. He partners with local governments to address workforce, governance, and operational challenges, offering practical, sustainable solutions (including extensive training on emerging tools like generative AI) to help organizations lead with confidence and thrive through change.
